SITUATION SUMMARY

Cal EOC Incident – 2014 Drought

- SOC / Inland REOC remains activated in support of 2014 Drought

Weather of Concern

Hurricane Blanca

- Hurricane Blanca continues to move north along the Baja Peninsula. This storm is expected to weaken to a tropical depression along the peninsula. The remnant moisture from this storm will be directed northward into the desert southwest however confidence is still low in exactly where the bulk of this moisture will go. There is potential for widespread precipitation from steady rain or showers and thunderstorms. The probable location for the below impacts will be areas southeast of I-15, however chances for these impacts exist over the entire region. The array of potential outcomes with this system range from little activity, to widespread steady rain, to widespread thunderstorms with life-threatening flash flooding.

Heat Advisory

- The recent cooler than normal weather will be replaced by very warm to hot readings today, 06/08/15 for most inland locations. In light of the recent string of cooler than normal days, many people may be caught off guard by the warm-up. Widespread mid 80s to mid 90s are expected with a few spots into the lower 100s through this afternoon and evening. Most inland locations and the South Bay will be impacted; however, this does not include the city of San Francisco.
- A heat advisory is now in effect for the following: Alameda, Contra Costa, Marin, Monterey, Napa, San Benito, San Mateo, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, and Sonoma Counties.

Fire Weather Watch

- Fire Weather Watch is in effect from Tuesday morning through Tuesday evening for areas in Siskiyou County.

Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County: http://www.wrh.noaa.gov/sto/brief/www_bc_cal.php

Increasing chance of thunderstorms Tuesday into Wednesday

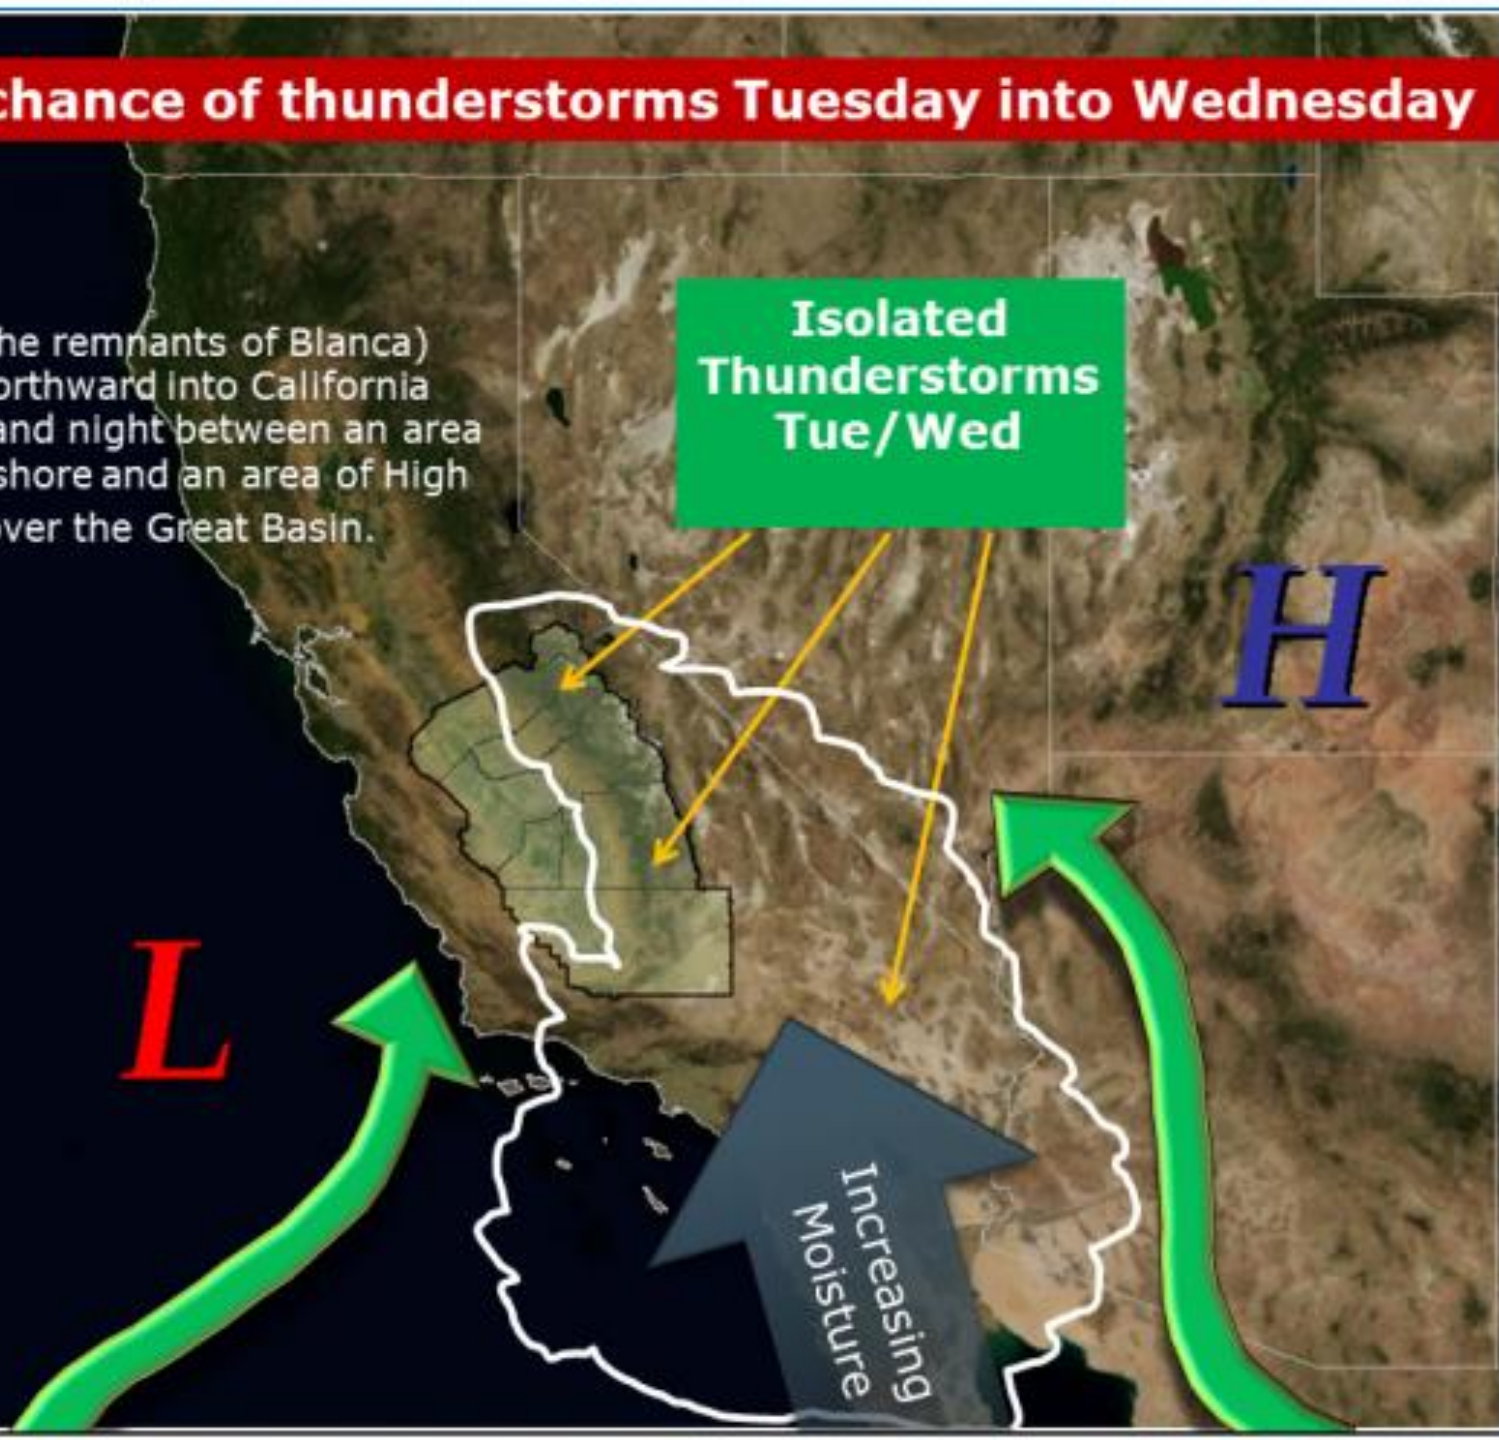

Tropical moisture (the remnants of Blanca) will be channeled northward into California Tuesday afternoon and night between an area of Low pressure offshore and an area of High pressure centered over the Great Basin.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

An upper low will move across central California by the middle of the week bringing increasing chances for showers and thunderstorms across the interior Monday through Wednesday. High temperatures across the interior will be well above normal through the coming week while near seasonal temperatures will persist near the coast.

Medford Weather:

Initially, Monday looks to be too dry and stable for much if any activity, but the strong surface heating will overwhelm the top warm layer and isolated activity will develop this afternoon, primarily over Siskiyou County.

Reno Weather:

Warming and drying trend continues today as a ridge of high pressure builds over the Pacific Northwest. Above normal temperatures persist through Tuesday. Another low will bring potentially severe thunderstorms Tuesday and more widespread showers on Wednesday. Dry and warm conditions return for the end of the week and weekend.

San Francisco Weather:

A thermal trough at the surface and ridging aloft will allow temperatures to rise well above normal today triggering a heat advisory for inland areas. An approaching upper level low will introduce slightly cooler temperatures as well as a chance of showers and isolated thunderstorms Tuesday and Wednesday.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Sacramento Weather:

Hot temperatures are expected through Tuesday. Isolated thunderstorms possible near Sierra Crest Monday, but dry over valley. There will be increased chances for showers and thunderstorms Tuesday and Wednesday.

Hanford Weather:

A ridge of high pressure aloft will bring well above normal temperatures to the central California interior today with only a slight chance of afternoon thunderstorms near the Sierra Crest. A northward influx of tropical moisture will increase thunderstorm possibilities throughout the district Tuesday through Wednesday with a continuation of above normal temperatures.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

Warm conditions are expected today as high pressure builds. For tonight and Tuesday, low pressure will approach the area and entrain moisture from the remnants of Tropical Storm Blanca. This will result in a chance of showers and thunderstorms over the area late tonight and Tuesday. On Wednesday, dry conditions are anticipated except for a slight chance of showers and thunderstorms over the mountains. Dry and seasonable conditions are expected Thursday through the weekend.

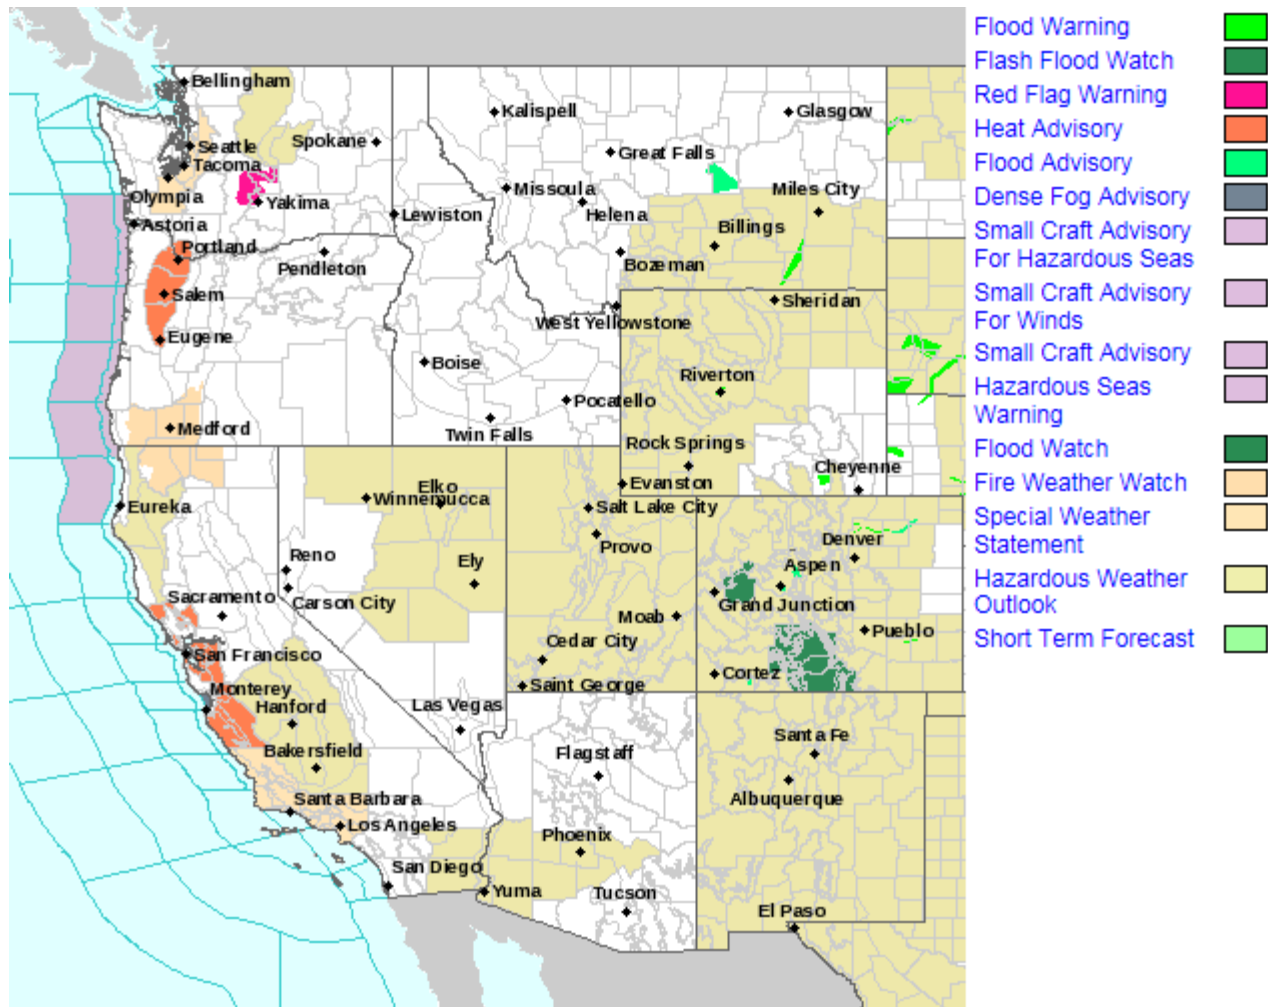

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

Very warm and dry for inland areas today. For tonight through Tuesday, moisture from the remnants of Hurricane Blanca will spread northward into the southwestern states. This will bring increasing humidities and a chance of showers and slight chance of thunderstorms. Locally heavy rainfall is possible mainly Tuesday afternoon near the mountains. A slight chance of thunderstorms will continue for the mountains on Wednesday afternoon. For Friday and Saturday moisture behind a weak low pressure system moving through the Great Basin will bring a slight chance of afternoon thunderstorms to the mountains. For next weekend, weak high pressure will bring an inland warming trend with a shallower marine layer for coastal areas.

Southeast California Weather:

Cloudiness and moisture from the remains of Hurricane Blanca is expected to begin to move northward into the desert southwest today with further increases in moisture and cloudiness to bring a chance of rainfall across the entire region on Tuesday especially across southeastern California along with cooler temperatures. Temperatures will warm a bit on Wednesday and Thursday, with little change on Friday, before cooling back down a bit over the weekend.
